

ADVERTISING REPLACEMENT FRAUD

This screenshot shows the Wall Street Journal homepage as it appears on a non-infected computer. The layout is clean and professional, with a clear hierarchy of content. The main headline is "Flurry of Changes to BP's Well", and the secondary headline is "Flotilla Assault Off Gaza Spurs Crisis". The "Market Data Center" section is visible on the right. At the bottom, there is a "What's News" section and a "Tech" section. A large advertisement for "The Plum Card" is prominently displayed in the center-right area.

Non-infected Computer

This screenshot shows the Wall Street Journal homepage as it appears on an infected computer. The layout is identical to the non-infected version, but there are noticeable differences. The "Market Data Center" section is visible on the right. At the bottom, there is a "What's News" section and a "Tech" section. A large advertisement for "Fashion Girl LA" is prominently displayed in the center-right area, replacing the "The Plum Card" ad seen in the non-infected version.
